MorQi

Balance is your superpower.

A five-element action game where kids master their feelings by freeing a frozen world.

Many kids carry anxiety. Few games help them with it.

11%

of US children aged 3–17 have diagnosed anxiety.

73%

of parents would rather their kids spend screen time gaming than on social media.

ESA, 2026 [3]

Parents want play that is good for their kids. Kids want play that is fun. MorQi is built to be both, without the child ever feeling taught.

Run in. Free them. Bring the world back.

An action game in the genre where your powers fire on their own and you move through whole crowds of creatures. Every creature you free turns the frozen ground back into life around you, so progress is something you can see.

Drag to move

One thumb. Powers and your spirit animal fight beside you.

Use the right element

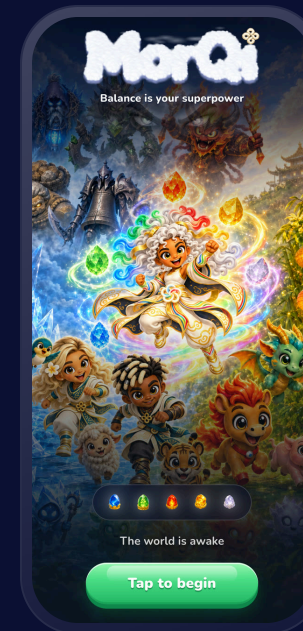

Each creature is weak to two elements. Match them and it frees twice as fast.

Hold the temple, wake the world

In the Grove, the Ridge and the Silver City, free creatures inside a frozen temple's ring and it lights up and fights for you. Giants crash in. Each needs its own trick. Everywhere, ice becomes beach and sea, bamboo, lanterns, harvest, a silver city.

Playable today on the web: 5 levels (four short realms and a finale of 10 minutes or more), 7 Keepers, 12 spirit animals, 15 creatures, 3 kinds of giant, 5 Star Calls, an original score.

Metal

Kids learn the five elements of traditional Chinese medicine the way they learn type matchups in any monster game: by playing. Water puts out fire, wood drinks up water, metal chops wood. Using a creature's weakness frees it twice as fast and earns a star.

Omni

THE WIN CONDITION 05

You can't win by grinding.
You win by balance.

Each realm holds Qi Stones. Free enough creatures, or wake its temples, and its stones are yours. Hold them all and your Keeper goes Omni: they become the all-five form, riding a storm of cloud and rainbow lightning, untouchable for fifteen seconds while the five elements break in their generating order, with its own anthem. Only then does the boss appear. In the finale, every stone takes Omni one tier higher, and full Omni finishes the boss.

The reward is the lesson. Balance is literally the superpower.

Every villain is a person stuck in one feeling.

Traditional Chinese medicine pairs each element with a feeling. Each realm's boss is a person frozen in that feeling. Beat the boss and they change back. Each one hands the Keeper a Star Call from their own story. Kids see that people can change, and so can they.

Five realms is chapter one. The world is still frozen.

The Stillmaker froze far more than five lands. Each season thaws another, and the story runs for years. The demo ends as he arrives.

1 A new land every season

Once the seed round lands, about every ten weeks: a new realm, new creatures, a new person to free and the Star Call they give. The story is always free.

2 Luma's nine tails

Luma grows one tail each season, and each brings back a memory of the hearth and the child who lived there. Nine tails lead to why the Stillmaker froze the world.

3 Deeper feelings as players grow

The first five lands hold fear, anger, restless excitement, worry and grief. Later lands, some where two elements meet, bring loneliness, jealousy, pride and shame.

4 Mastery with no ceiling

Omni and fusions today; next, spirit animals that grow for months and a Sanctuary that grows with everyone you free; later, a Surge for each element.

5 A reason to return every day, every year

Later: family co-op where the hardest bosses need a team in balance, a daily Rift, and yearly festivals like Lunar New Year and Mid-Autumn.

LUMA'S TAILS  NOW → SEASON 8

Planned, except what is marked today. The five realms, Omni, fusions and the Freed Book are playable on the web now. A $100K raise funds the first season; a season about every ten weeks comes with the seed round.

Abby got better fast

Between two sessions an hour apart, on an updated build, her Level 2 went from 3 falls and 1 ultimate to 0 falls and 3 ultimates. Sixteen minutes heads-down in session two.

Demaris: "Still challenging, but I can get out in the ways that I should."

An experienced player, and a co-founder, so we count his word as feedback, not proof.

Abby had never played this kind of game. Two players are a story, not data. This round buys the data.

Free to play. Fair to pay. Safe by design.

Free to play, with every story chapter free. A new season arrives about every ten weeks with a free story track and a Season Path of outfits, looks and that season's spirit animal. Nothing you can buy gives a stat advantage.

Season Path, the premium reward track	$5.99
Path+, with the season's hero on day one	$9.99
Extra spirit animal, also earnable in about two months	$5.99
Looks for powers and animals, no added power	$1.99–$3.99
Second chance, reopens an unfinished Path	$0.99

a season per paying family: Path+ ($9.99), one spirit animal ($5.99), one look ($2.99) and one second chance ($0.99), about $8.70 a month. At 3–5% of players paying, 100,000 monthly players gross about $310K–$520K a year, and 1,000,000 about $3.1M–$5.2M.

From five playable levels to a game families come back to.

DONE

The game, playable

Design, five web levels, original score, two playtests.

MONTHS 1–2

Native iPhone

Level 1 rebuilt as a native game: the run, powers, spirit animal.

MONTHS 3–4

The loop around the run

A home base and spirit animal growth. At $100K, also the first season and its Season Path.

MONTHS 5–6 (TO 9 AT $100K)

Families, then soft launch

About 100 families on TestFlight from month 5, so day-30 numbers land by month 6; then one or two markets. Targets: day 1 at 35–50%, day 7 at 15–25%, day 30 at 5–15%.

THEN

The seed round

$1.75M–$4M on real retention data: the full team, five seasons a year, Android.

Later, play together. Each family member brings an element, and the hardest bosses fall only to a team in balance. The game's lesson becomes its multiplayer.

Two founders, one playable game.

It started with Qigong. Filming Demaris's masterclasses, Amos also saw him at home, as a father, and was struck by his kids: calm, sharp and able to name what they felt. Two lifelong gamers asked if a game could carry some of that practice to every child. MorQi began as a kids' app and became a game for everyone, kids and grown-ups alike, that teaches without teaching.

Amos A.

Co-founder and Creative Director, DP Media.
Lead concept, story and contact.

Demaris Parker

Co-founder and Wellness Director, DP Media.
Qigong master and bodywork practitioner.
Shaped the concept, rooted in the Qigong at its heart.

Sammy P.

Consultant on game mechanics, strategy and tactics.

Everything in this bible was built by DP Media's founders with an AI-assisted pipeline: five levels, seven Keepers, twelve spirit animals, fifteen creatures and an original score. The founders work without salary, so every dollar of this round goes into the game.

$60K to put MorQi in families' hands.

$60K

Target. About six months to a soft launch.

$100K

The most we'd take. Nine months and a bigger test.

What it proves: day-1, day-7 and day-30 retention from real families, how much of each session goes to the lessons and, at $100K, whether parents buy the Season Path. For scale, Nurture raised a $2.8M pre-seed in 2024 for empathy and resilience play [12].
